Magic Frimley Park

Playground open for fun

ANNUAL PLAN HELPS OUT

POPULAR POWER PARK

COMMITMENT TO COMMUNITY

HASTINGS DOES DECO

It is no accident that Hastings has very good infrastructure – things like water and sewer pipes, playgrounds, swimming pools and libraries. This is a result of previous and current Council decisions over more than 100 years, made in consultation with the public.

Some of the major items in this year's budget – inner city parking, Council's contribution to the planned sports hub (mooted by Graeme Avery), and putting in toilets at Maraetotara, one of our busiest visitor sports in the summer - are covered in articles on this page, so I'll concentrate on a couple of the smaller but no less important items.

One of these is the putting aside of $10,000 towards a neighbourhood park in Flaxmere.

This one shows that putting your ideas forward to Council does pay off. Reva Ngapoe wrote to Council through the annual plan process asking that play equipment be put on Council-owned green space in Kilkee Terrace in Flaxmere. Ms Ngapoe put up a good case. While there are playgrounds in the vicinity, they are too far away for the many youngsters in Kilkee St and the surrounding roads to safely get to. She also argued that having a gathering space in the street would "enhance the sense of community by becoming a focal point in the street".

Council has not been able to supply the full cost of putting in a neighbourhood playground on the section in this funding round, but has kick-started the project and will supply staff expertise to help the community fundraise towards the goal.

Without Ms Ngapoe's input it is highly unlikely that this project would have made it onto Council's radar, never mind attracted funds. She is proof that getting involved does achieve goals.

Another smaller project to get help is the Waitangi Day celebrations at Clive which has been held every year since 2000 except for this year when illness and a shortage of volunteers lead to a glitch. The event is back on track however after the Hastings, Napier and regional council all responded positively to annual plan requests, putting $12,000 into the pot. Hastings gave organisers Marie and Jim Edwards $4000. I think this type of event, celebrating our heritage on the beautiful Clive River, is crucial to our culture and it is wonderful that we have been able to ensure it is held again in 2017.

Mayor Lawrence Yule

Loos and bins all part of the plan for the year

Being able to keep the rate increase very low and assist with a wide range of projects across the district though this year's annual plan is a great outcome.

Hastings District Council has gone through the plan for the coming 12 months and set the budget. The result was very pleasing, Hastings mayor Lawrence Yule said.

"As well as budgeting for all the things we normally do – roads, water and sewage systems, footpaths and things, we have been able to put money towards projects that will make very real differences to our people. They are projects that are important to our residents; their enjoyment of their district and their future."

Subject to confirmation at the full council meeting on June 30, the rate increase this year was set at an average 2.8 per cent.

One of the biggest announcements is that Council is officially putting its backing behind the $10 million sports hub proposed by Sir Graeme Avery. The vision is for a world class facility which includes indoor sprint track and pole vault dome, high-performance gym, sports hall, sports medicine centre and café – all on the Hawke's Bay Regional Sports Park.

A $1.75m allowance already in the long term budget for a main facility on the sports park has been brought forward to put into the project, and $250,000 added to it to bring the investment up to $2m.

Next year Council will consult with the public on whether to put another $2m into the project.

Keeping Hastings most popular spots in top condition is always a Council priority and this year toilets and rubbish bins will go in at Maraetotara Falls. The summer crowds at the awesome visitor attraction can exceed thousands over a summer weekend and it has become increasingly obvious that public toilets are necessary. Rubbish has also been a problem. It is not easy to install and maintain toilets in remote locations, however improving technology has made the option manageable.

Much smaller requests were fully considered and in the main approved. Amongst them was a request for a contribution towards Waitangi Day celebrations at Clive ($5000), fitness equipment in Anderson Park ($5000); shade cloth at William Nelson Park ($15,000) and a verandah over the stage in Flaxmere Park ($25,000).

Funds have been earmarked for the Horse of the Year(HOY) show but will not be confirmed until a review of the event underway now is completed. An allowance to help fund improvements at the A&P Showgrounds has also been provided for, however discussions with Hawke's Bay A&P Society will be held to agree priorities before the money is confirmed.

"Both these amounts are provisional. In the case of Horse of the Year, a final decision will not be made until after we have the results of an independent review of the event, which is being undertaken now," said Mr Yule.

"With the A&P Showgrounds, it will depend on agreeing a list of capital improvements which include items that will reduce costs for HOY."

Some projects will be loan funded, some are able to be funded from existing budgets and some will be funded from rates.

No coin parking for another six months

Free parking in Hastings will continue for another six months and the cost will not be charged to ratepayers' accounts.

Hastings District Council decided during the annual plan process to continue the trial to December 30.

"There is no doubt the vibe in the city is improved and the retail figures are excellent, and I think the majority of people like not having to use meters," said mayor Lawrence Yule.

"However it is a fact that running parking is not free because we need to police the time people stay in parks among other things, and the real issue is how to pay for it," said Mr Yule.

Based on feedback from the public, it is clear residents want to continue not having to find coins to put into meters but are not happy with the plan to target rates to properties to cover the cost, he said.

The continued trial will give Council more time to explore other options for paying for central city parking should they decide to continue it into next year.

It would also allow time for more data to be gathered on whether not having to pay for parking through meters has led to improved economic outcomes.

The $270,000 cost of the extended trial will come out of the Hastings car parking reserve fund which has been built up from parking meter funds and infringement payments over time.

Mr Yule said "everyone I have talked to wants to keep the free parking; the sticking point has been how we should pay for it".

Council heard that the retail economy in Hastings is "going through a really good time". But how much of that was due to 'free' parking could not be definitively measured, said Mr Yule.

"There is no doubt that our central city is a brighter, busier, more vibrant place, and at least some of that has to be down to free parking," said deputy mayor Cynthia Bowers.

"This is one of the building blocks in growing vibrancy in our central city which is a good thing for our whole district. I haven't met one person who wants to go back to putting a coin back into a meter. The sticking point is paying for that, and extending the trial gives us time to put our minds to solving that issue," she said.

Plenty to do these school holidays

Great activities are on offer at the Hastings District Council-run facilities in the school holidays - and many of them are free.

Swim Heretaunga and Clive Pool are open every day, and for those who want something extra, there's aqua play on the giant inflatables from 12.30 to 3pm.

Entry to the Hastings City Art Gallery is free and is the perfect place to spend some time. Create and build with the 50,000 pieces of white lego, or discover the Visiting Asia mixed media exhibit.

The gallery is also running school holidays workshops inspired by the current exhibitions, at $10 a child.

If the kids need to burn off some energy, the Flaxmere Community Centre is running a free badminton/table tennis/tug-of-war competition in the first week of the holidays for kids aged 11 and up. In the second week, there's a dodge ball team competition for teams of eight, at a cost of $20 a team. Registrations are being taken at the community centre.

The libraries are the perfect place to hang out in the holidays and there are free activities most days. Highlights include making a Lego costume, creating and publishing a magazine, Playstation 3 games night, and Kanikani (dance and movement) sessions.

For the schedule, see: hastingslibrary.co.nz.

Unison CEO Ken Sutherland and Hastings mayor Lawrence Yule launch the Power Park.

Hastings District - going electric!

Unison's 'Power Park' in Queen Street West has been a hit with electric vehicle owners in the district.

There have been 33 charging sessions since it went 'live', with Unison also says that the 185kWh supplied is enough energy for an electric vehicle to drive over 1,200 kilometres.

The rapid 'Power Park' charger, which was installed in partnership with the Hastings District Council, is the first of four planned across Napier, Taupo and Rotorua. This is in line with the Government's stated aim of increasing the use of electric vehicles in New Zealand.

Council believes electric vehicles will play a part in the region's transport future and is happy to partner with Unison to provide a public charging station.

"Hastings District Council purchased an electric vehicle this year, which the parking team use daily and are finding it to be a cost-effective, environmentally-friendly alternative to a petrol vehicle, as well as a great car to drive," said mayor Lawrence Yule.

Electric vehicles produce no emissions which will help the Government's target of reducing greenhouse gas emissions to 30 percent below 2005 levels by 2030.

And the electricity used to charge a vehicle is good for the environment too, as most of New Zealand's electricity is produced from renewable energy sources (hydro, wind and geothermal, says Unison).

While it is early days for electric vehicle adoption in Hawke's Bay, Unison says electric cars are becoming more affordable as evidenced by the increased uptake New Zealand-wide. The Ministry of Transport says that 1220 light vehicles are currently registered, growing steadily from just a handful of registrations in 2013.

HDC's electric car is used every day and covers around 120km on one charge, so it is ideal for its role within the parking team. Unison's "Power Park" charging station, Queen St West carpark, is free to use until September.

It will be 40c a minute after that, so a typical charge of 20 minutes will cost $8.

The Leg-Up trust was one of the recipients of this year's Civic Honours Awards.

2016 Civic Honours bestowed to worthy recipients

Six individuals and one group were recognised at the 2016 Civic Honours Awards last month.

The awards are presented annually by the Council to recognise an individual, group or voluntary organisation that has volunteered time and energy to help improve the life of the Hastings community.

Hastings Mayor Lawrence Yule presented the awards in the Council Chamber in front of a capacity crowd of family and friends. He praised the volunteers for generously giving their time to make contact, provide support and encouragement and often providing humour to make someone's life a bit more bearable.

The first to receive an award this year was Jim Edwards for his work with the Ngā Tukemata-O-Kahungunu Trust. The trust was formed following the closure of the Tomoana Freezing works in the 1990's and focuses on supporting people from all walks of life with disabilities.

Pauline Pohatu, Tapatu Kautai and Fern Hawkins were rewarded for their dedication to the Flaxmere College Parent Teacher Association. For the past 23 years these ladies have been a vital part of college life in Flaxmere.

Phil Harman received an award for his voluntary work with the Waimarama Surf Lifesaving Club. He joined the Club back in 1981 and is still an active lifeguard and patrol captain at Waimarama Beach.

Sharee Jones is the chairperson of the Hastings Athletics club and HBG children's athletic committee, secretary of Athletics Hawke's Bay Gisborne and is on the administration committee of the New Zealand Children's Athletic Association. She received a sport and recreation award for her efforts in inspiring young athletes to reach their potential and perform at the highest level.

The final award for 2016 went to the Leg-Up Trust. The trust was set up in 2002 when founder Ros Rowe realised that horses could reach youth in a way no human could. Trust members work with disadvantaged youth to give them greater confidence, teach them life skills and give them something to get up for in the morning.

The evening also included a special 'Long Service Award' presentation to David Sykes of Clive who has given over 30 years service to Hastings Civil Defence.

Magic at Frimley Park

Children have been climbing all over the new play equipment at the Frimley Park playground since its opening a fortnight ago.

Families flocked to the new Frimley Park playground for its official opening.

The playground with a difference was designed with sensory play and universal access top of the innovation list.

All the usual park elements are there, swings, slides and rope climbs, but there are also bright colours defining different areas - designed to help those with poor vision or with learning disabilities, things like congo drums and talk tubes, a wheelchair-friendly roundabout, artificial turf across the play area suitable for all mobilities, and a circular path for scootering.

Adding to the stimulating environment are 283 plants across eight species, chosen for their texture, scent and bright colours. The garden within the playground had been designed to appeal to children and adults with low vision or who focus on the texture of things

There are a bunch of other interesting statistics that have stood out in the construction of the playground: there is 51m<sup>3</sup> of sand in the sandpit; 15 tonnes of sand spread over the Astroturf (for drainage and cushioning); the track circling the playground is exactly 118m (which means 17 laps will get you to two kilometres); under the roundabout there is a 1.5m deep hole filled with 1.37m<sup>3</sup> of concrete; 300 tonnes of shingle and stone made up the base course; 32m<sup>3</sup> of coloured concrete was incorporated into the design.
