LOVING IT

BRING ON SUMMER AT SPLASH PLANET

FREE PARKING
IN THE CITY

STAPLES RODWAY
CHALLENGE

The Farmers' Market has moved outdoors, the community pools and Splash Planet are about to open, the night markets in the city are back on, the beaches are beckoning and our parks are in great order.

It is the perfect time to remind ourselves how lucky we are to live in one of the top sunshine regions in New Zealand, with plenty of outdoor space to enjoy it.

One of those spaces is the Hawke's Bay Regional Sports Park which has just presented its annual report to council. There is some very good news in there. The growth in numbers of our people using the park is fantastic; netball in particular has grown phenomenally. It is now the biggest participation sport in New Zealand, and Hawke's Bay is the fourth largest netball playing region in New Zealand. That is in no small part down to the space and functionality available at the sports park. The one bug bear, the difficulty of getting so many vehicles and people into the park on winter Saturdays, has been solved with the second entrance completed, and I know users are much happier about that.

It is not all about mainstream sports though, for example the primary school cross country this year attracted 500 students from 50 schools, and this year's Tough Kids Day had 2000 entrants, up from 300 last year. The cycle skills course is being used by schools across Napier and Hastings, rugby league has made the park its home, there's a ki o rahi field, and the have-a-go days for 'recycled teenagers' are proving popular with the over 55s. Aside from sport – massive kapa haka events are held on a stage in the park at least once a year.

The plan behind the park was to build an exceptional facility that could be used by all residents and attract events from outside the region. It has worked: On any day of the week people can call in to watch some action, use the perimeter for a bit of a walk or run, or join in on some organised sport. The trust running the park, of which I am a trustee, is very pleased with the success and I urge those who haven't taken a close look at it to get along and make the most of what is, at the end of the day, your asset.

Fantastic F.A.W.C!

As this issue of My Hastings is published there is just two sleeps to go until F.A.W.C! kicks off.

Summer F.A.W.C! runs from November 6 to 15, and showcases the very best of Hawke's Bay food and wine – and talent from all over New Zealand.

And this, the 4th Summer F.A.W.C!, is proving extremely popular, with 30 of the 79 events sold out and 3500 tickets sold three weeks prior to the first day.

It is no wonder; the talent this year is amazing, from Al Brown and Peta Mathias to Ray McVinnie and Nici Wickes. In all there are 50-plus food, wine and brewing events.

Half the events are in Hastings and its environs. While the tickets to many events close to home have already been snapped up, hopefully, if people are quick, they may still be able to get in on the action.

As this issue went to print there were still tickets available to the "First Course", the opening event at Black Barn, and on the last day, the "Superfoods High Tea" at Millhills Lodge, and plenty more in between.

Off the menu for late ticket buyers are some brilliant names, including first time F.A.W.C!

er Josh Emmet – one of the chefs in charge of telling people they must "leave the MasterChef kitchen".

Josh will be appearing at Trinity Hill and is as excited about attending F.A.W.C! as his guests will be. "I spend a lot of time with family in Hawke's Bay and have heard a lot about F.A.W.C!. I am really looking forward to getting back down to the region and discovering what the festival is all about and having the opportunity to use all that great local produce."

Tickets also snapped up very quickly included those to "The Icons Dinner" at Elephant Hill on the first day, "Terroir" at Craggy Range Winery, "The Amazing Grace" brunch at the Farmers' Market, which at the time of going to press had a handful of tickets left and the ever popular Hawke's Bay Wine Auction.

A bunch of exciting events were still up for grabs two weeks out however, in particular Martin Bosley's burger bar in Donelly St, Havelock North, the one night "burger bar of your dreams".

It is free, you just pay for what you eat and drink. Open from 4pm to 7.30pm, it is billed as a great place to grab a starter before heading off to other F.A.W.C! events, "or hang in for the long haul".

For lovers of seafood, there is the "Seafood Legacy" at Vidals on November 7, or "Seafood and Semillon" at Seleni Estates Winery on November 8, while for those who have always wanted to try a huhu grub there is the "Weird and Wonderful", also November 7, at Diva Bar and Restaurant in Havelock North.

Summer F.A.W.C!: Time for great food and great company in Hawke's Bay.

Thursday night (November 12) will be a big night in Hastings, with the F.A.W.C!-isation of the Hastings City Night Market. Hastings City Business Association is promising "even more diverse and delicious street food stalls, entertainment and arts and crafts".

Adding to the market atmosphere will be the "Roving culinary carnival", a free event starting off at the Common Room in Heretaunga St. After a cocktail and a canapé, ticket holders will follow live music and street performers to the Opera Kitchen for the main course, then through the night market, to the Little Black Bird Eatery for dessert.

To round out the massive food fest, in Hastings on the last Sunday there are four Hastings events, "The Good Ole Days, at Sacred Hill Vineyard, the Locavore's Lunch, Te Awa Winery, The Slider and Ale Sunday Session, at Delicious Tapas, and the "Superfoods High Tea" at Millhills Lodge.

Great leaders are growing here

Making sure our leaders of tomorrow have help to realise their potential is the aim of the annual Hastings Young Leaders' Conference.

The first conference, organised by Hastings District Youth Council, was held last year. The second one, held at Iona College in September, was upscaled to include more students.

The conference covered a range of topics for different age groups. Workshops included 'Facing adversity' aimed at students who may have more than the normal challenges to overcome, 'Leadership in the digital age', designed to help students identify the positive and negative that come with the internet, and 'Practical Leadership Skills' for students already in leadership roles in their schools or groups in the community.

It was not all serious stuff, however. Emcees K-Ci Williams and Malindi Wilson had them dancing on stage and doing press ups in return for chocolate, and they enjoyed a kick-around in the sun between sessions.

Growing up: Tomorrow's great leaders get a helping hand.

Help on-line

A treasure trove of contacts for youth is available on-line; covering everything from social and health services, to sports, recreation, church groups and education and training. Each listing has a brief description of service and contact details.

Also on the database is a list of charitable funders and scholarship providers, with information on what they provide, links to the funders website where applicable, and phone and email contact details.

Hastings District Council's social and youth development team has committed to keeping the list updated.

It is designed to be of use to youth service providers, such as mentors and school counsellors, although youth and parents can also access the list.

Time to make a Splash!

The water is in and warming up; a painting marathon is almost complete; the café food is being ordered; the gardener has been putting final touches to the grounds – and the staff has mushroomed from five to 80.

It is almost time for the summer season of Splash Planet to kick off – Monday, November 16 is the first day of the season.

Manager Peran Hutchings is expecting big numbers this year. The forecast is for the hottest and longest summer in nearly 20 years. An average of 100,000 people make use of the facility in a season, and he is not prepared to hazard a guess over what that number will be this summer.

“It’s going to be a long, hot summer; forecasted to be the hottest since 1997, so we’re expecting lots of people to be in here cooling off.”

There is a truckload of things to do at the theme park, from the obvious, swimming, to kayaking, bumper boats, train rides, go-karting, mini golf, volleyball, and the flying fox.

And then there are the slides, all five of the: the Master Blaster, the Sky Castle Screamer, the Sky Tunnel, the Super Cruiser and the Double Dipper.

For those who like their water warm or have littlies, there are the toddlers’ pools inside and out, and indoor heated swimming pools.

It takes a great deal of planning and co-ordination to get the near 15-acre theme park ready for its four month season. Hawke’s Bay’s sun punishes the paint work on everything from rides to the picnic tables so it’s a constant task to keep everything fresh.

Signs and shade canopies are removed out of season to protect them from the elements so they have to be pulled out of storage and re-erected.

The extensive gardens and lawns need continuous care to keep them in order, the pools, empty over the winter, have to be scrubbed and refilled, and then there are the new touches that make heading back to the facility after an off-season a real treat.

This year the mini-putt has been refreshed with a Alice in Wonderland theme – complete with the iconic cup and saucer, the Cheshire cat, a deck of cards character, and a “down-the-rabbit-hole” golf shot.

One of the must sees, especially for pre-schoolers, will be the transformation of one of the mature trees into a “fairy tree”.

The residents’ club card is again available. For $17 a season the card holder and nine others can get into the pools (and take all the rides) for $17 an adult and $11 a child – a saving of $11 per trip for an adult and $7 for a child. To register see: splashplanet.co.nz, or get one from the Splash Planet office when it opens on November 16.

Of course many people have been asking what will be replacing the old Fantasyland Pirate Ship, lost to the actions of a pair of arsonists over the winter. Mr Hutchings plans to put a range of options to facility users over the summer to get their feedback, with the outcome of the consultation leading to a winter project to put in the new attraction.

Hot: Summer is coming and it’s going to be a goodie. Residents can jump online, splashplanet.co.nz, or head to the Splash Planet office once it opens, and get their residents’ concession pass.

Park free in the CBD

HOW IT WORKS:

Coloured plates reading “Free parking, limit one hour”, or “Free parking, limit two hours”, will be placed over parking meters.

Council’s six off-street car parks will also be free, with a time limit of three hours.

Drivers who stay longer than the designated time limit will be ticketed.

There is no change to the management of leased parking and mobility parking.

From November 1 parking will be free in Hastings city centre for four months – but there will still be time limits.

Work on revitalising and invigorating the central city is firmly on the agenda of Hastings District Council and the Hastings City Business Association.

Free parking is one of the ways of attracting people into the city, to relax and enjoy the atmosphere, says Hastings District councillor Sandra Hazlehurst. “It’s about feeling welcomed into our beautiful city centre, rather than rushed and having to hunt about for coins.

“It’s also about having consistent parking rules across Hastings – whether you’re in Havelock North, the central city, or in the private shopping centres. Wherever you are, you’ll have free parking.”

The time limits have been retained to ensure people do not “hog” parks. It is important to retailers and customers that everyone has access to parking. Those who abuse the time limits will be ticketed.

It will initially be a four month trial, until the end of February, with council to decide then on whether parking charges will be reinstated, if there will be a further trial, or if ratepayers will be asked if it should be made permanent.

Business association general manager Susan McDade said the move put the central city on a par with other retail centres that provide free parking for their customers.

“It is a positive sign for our central business district that the council has committed to revitalising the central city as a priority over the next few years. While the free parking is not a silver bullet it is a step in the direction to make us not only the most beautiful city but the most liveable city as well.

“Our retailers and cafes are really happy to have this four month free parking trial to give them a much needed boost in the crucial Christmas period. The business association will be surveying the businesses and the public to evaluate the trial.”

Events in the city, especially in central city mall, Civic Square and the newly finished Albert Square, are also livening up the city atmosphere. The action started off with a week of live daily live concerts in the second week of October and now artists on stage at lunchtimes on Fridays and Saturdays for the rest of the summer.

In the wake of a symposium on the central city in August, other initiatives on the drawing board include encouraging inner city living above shops, drawing retail into a tighter area, actively marketing the outskirts to businesses suited to the edges of retail, and continuing to ask retailers and residents to put forward their ideas for spicing up the city.

McDade says the council’s support for the city centre is very encouraging. “I see tangible actions coming out of the symposium. We are partnering with council on numerous activities designed to bring people into the city. Watch this space.”
